A friend of mine was walking down a deserted Mexican beach at sunset. As he walked along, he began to see another man in the distance. As he grew nearer, he noticed that the local native kept leaning down, picking something up and throwing it out into the water. Time and again he kept hurling things out into the ocean.

As my friend got even closer, he noticed that the man was picking up the starfish that had been washed up on the beach and one at a time he was throwing them back into the water.

My friend was puzzled. He approached the man and said, "Good evening friend. I was wondering what you are doing."

"I'm throwing these starfish back into the ocean. You see, it's low tide right now and all of these starfish have been washed up onto the shore. If I don't throw them back into the sea, they'll die up here from lack of oxygen."

Brisk walking is good for the heart, which makes a lot of sense. The heart is a muscle and anything that makes the blood flow faster through a muscle helps keep it in shape. It even seems to make the blood less "sticky", and therefore, less likely to produce unwanted clots. This all adds up to as much as a 50-percent reduction in the risk of suffering the heart attack.
